Critics have long questioned why the National Institutes of Health (NIH) would fund experiments by University of North Carolina of Chapel Hill (UNC) professor Ralph Baric to develop a technique for hiding evidence of human tampering in laboratory-created super viruses.

Aided by some \$220.5 million in National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID) funding, Baric developed a so-called "Seamless Ligation" technique, which he boasted could perfectly conceal all evidence of human tampering in laboratory-created viruses. Baric nicknamed his invention the "no-see'm" method.

Now a new study, "Endonuclease fingerprint indicates a synthetic origin of SARS-CoV2," published on the preprint server bioRxiv, shows that — apparently unbeknownst to Baric — the "seamless ligation" concealment gimmick leaves its own minute but legible signature.

Most momentously, these same researchers have discovered that damning signature in the genome of the virus that causes COVID-19.

Baric's technique has long been controversial. "It's the artist that doesn't sign his name to the painting; the virologist that doesn't put his signature into the virus to let us know whether or not it is emerging naturally or whether it is produced in a laboratory," said Jeffrey Sachs, chair of The Lancet COVID-19 Commission, a task force that investigated the origins of COVID-19.

"All of it says, my God, there was really a big, very risky research agenda underway."

This month, Sachs published the results of his 22-month investigation in The Lancet, including the damaging conclusion that COVID-19 was probably laboratory-generated and that the technology probably came from NIH-funded science.

Referring to Baric's seamless ligation methodology, evolutionary biologist Bret Weinstein observed:

"It's the exact opposite of what you would do if your interest was public health. Public health scientists would be marking their enhancements with red flags — not devising ways to hide them. The only reason you would want a concealer is to advance a sinister purpose — such as illegal bioweapons development — some mischief that the scientist didn't want traceable back to his lab."

Baric taught his "no-see'm" method to the Wuhan Institute of Virology's (WIV) "Bat Lady" Shi Zhengli in 2016. In return, Baric received Chinese coronaviruses collected by Shi from bats in Yunnan province.

(Scientists have linked the COVID-19 genome's pedigree to closely related bats.)

Shi and her colleagues at the Wuhan Institute subsequently demonstrated their mastery of Baric's high-risk technique in a series of published — and highly controversial — gain-of-function experiments at the Wuhan lab. It has been even more puzzling to his critics that Baric, again with NIAID funding, chose to share this dangerous technique for weaponizing pathogens with Chinese scientists who have clear links to the Chinese military.

Experts say that the implications of this new study could be far-reaching. By pointing the finger at Baric, the study raises the possibility of potentially devastating liability for the NIAID and the University of North Carolina and other parties.

Scientists, including those close to Dr. Anthony Fauci, have repeatedly pointed out that SARS-CoV-2, the virus that causes COVID-19, has genomic sequences that appear inconsistent with natural evolution: The COVID-19 virus is no longer infectious in bats, and its spiked protein feature — which is unknown in this family of coronavirus — includes numerous mutations that make it ideally infectious in humans.

The closest known coronavirus relative — a coronavirus from the Wuhan lab — is 96.2% identical to SARS-CoV-2. The peculiar spike accounts almost completely for the entire 3.8% difference. Oddly, there are multiple novel mutations in the spike and almost none in the rest of the genome.

Natural evolution would be expected to leave mutations distributed evenly across the genome. The fact that virtually all the mutations occur on the spike led these scientists to suspect that that particular Wuhan lab coronavirus collected by Shi Zhengli is the direct progenitor of SARS-CoV-2 and that its new spike was implanted through engineering.

However, the unmistakable fingerprints of lab engineering were absent — leaving many experts wondering whether Baric's technique was used to assemble a novel coronavirus with the engineered spike while removing the evidence of lab generation.

This new study connects the biological breadcrumbs that link federally funded research to a global pandemic. That trail leads directly to UNC and NIAID.

The authors of the study — a team of researchers from Duke University, University Clinics of Würzburg and an industry group — identified a characteristic signature in the amino acid code. That indelible artifact could only have emerged from Baric's "no-see'm" methodology.

In an interview last spring, Baric himself confessed, that at the time the pandemic began, only two or three labs in the world were using his protocol — including his UNC lab and the WIV.

The study's authors' conclusions rest on the presence of unique sites in the COVID-19 virus. These sites allow special enzymes called "restriction enzymes" to cut the DNA into building blocks of unique size that then can be "stitched together in the correct order of the viral genome," according to the study's authors.

Essentially, Baric's technique leaves behind unique spellings in the "genetic vocabulary." The new words include "odd spelling choices" subtly distinguishing them from typical viral vocabulary.

The magic of Baric's "no-see'm" technique is to invisibly weave these telltale "spelling" changes into the viral sequence between relevant genes without altering the viral protein. This is like changing the "spelling" of the word without changing its meaning; the casual listener will never notice the difference.

The research team used forensic tools to drill down on minute "spelling differences" in the SARS-CoV2 genome that betray laboratory tampering using the "no-see'm" technique.

Consider how a Brit would spell "colour," "manoeuvre" or "paediatric." The choice to spell a word in a certain way can reveal your nation of origin. Similarly, these nearly imperceptible changes in the viral sequence give away the laboratory origins of this virus.

In sharing his seamless ligation technique with Shi Zhengli, Baric assured that the WIV possessed all the required elements of the assembly process. EcoHealth Alliance's infamous DEFUSE proposal describes the same techniques in detail. (submitted to The Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, or DARPA, in 2018).

The world now has proof positive that SARS-CoV2 is an engineered laboratory creation generated with technology developed by Ralph Baric with U.S. government funding.

Prosecutors and private attorneys representing clients injured by the COVID-19 pandemic now have a smoking gun. The gun points at humanity. Forensic scientists have now successfully lifted faint but precise fingerprints from the lethal pistol's grip and trigger. Those fingerprints belong to the NIAID and the University of North Carolina.

Baric is Fauci's favorite gain-of-function scientist. The cascade of NIAID funding to Baric and his UNC lab has financed 152 studies approaching a quarter-billion dollars.

Those federal grants have made Baric the global kingpin of gain-of-function science. In conformance with standard practice, it is probable that UNC pockets one-quarter to one-half of NIH's financial felicities to Baric for "administrative costs."

These monumental payments have probably incentivized UNC to turn a blind eye to Baric's reckless experiments and to his controversial decision to transfer his dangerous technologies to a Chinese military laboratory known to suffer from deficient safety protocols and shoddy construction that make it, in the words of Congressional investigators, less secure than a "dentist's office."

UNC's role in enabling the questionable conduct may have precipitated a global pandemic that could easily give rise to liability for negligence.

UNC and NIAID's liability is now clear. But do we have positive proof that the Wuhan lab created the monstrosity that caused COVID-19?

The cumulative evidence strongly suggests that the Wuhan lab used Baric's methodologies to cobble together the chimeric virus that caused the COVID-19 pandemic. But a few missing puzzle pieces still prevent us from definitively proving that this dangerous construction project occurred at the Wuhan lab.

As The Lancet Commission report concluded, the released emails show that NIH's Dr. Francis Collins, NIAID's Fauci and EcoHealth Alliance's Peter Daszak, and others are continuing to collaborate with Shi Zhengli and Chinese officials to suppress the public release of information that would allow us to complete this picture. Stay tuned!

How could they think they could pull off the biggest crime of the century and not get caught? But then the powers that be got away with 9/11. The public bought the pancake theory. So "yeah, we can do this. The public is stupid." People need to open their eyes and see the long list of crimes the government has gotten away with. Kennedy assassination, weapons of mass destruction. It is one covert operation after another.

To clarify, the "pancake theory" was correct insofar as the Twin Towers were designed to collapse in their own footprint ---- the anomaly was the speed of collapse --- impossible without removing all compound resistance, which is what a controlled demolition does.

(EurekaGGN installing fiber optics cabling, most likely with nanothermite interleaved throughout, was the instigator --- this took place within the top 20 to 40 floors of the Twin Towers in the previous 4 days!)

Taking a quick look at the Lancet article, I note they are still promoting the same lame narrative of how to deal with pandemics. No mention that there were medications already available they suppressed. That the masks provide no real protection and are useless having openings in microns larger than aerosolized particles. No mention of do called test kits running PCR cycles way to high in number to giving anything meaningful other than to confirm a false positive and driving the tyranny of the true agenda which the WEF never hid. The Great Reset. Klaus Schwab, accolade of Kissinger, members of the club run ultimately by the enemy of Man. All will bend the knee to Jesus and answer and go to the same place called Hell reserved initially for Fallen angels, but now will include all who agreed with them. Crowley and then Parsons opened portals to allow them in, and our governments cooperate with them to our own destruction. It is written unless those days are shortened for the elects sake no flesh would be saved. It is also written in Psalms 2 what the Creator is doing in response. There are no aliens, only fallen angels for we wrestle to the death not against flesh and blood. The enemy was a liar and murderer from the beginning.

Agreed. They're controlled opposition. They never isolated covid 19. Never did any scientific inquiry or methods to prove koch postulates, show causation of symptoms and deaths from covid 19 itself. They rigged the diagnostic criteria for cases and death counts and certification protocols. They manufactured a crisis out of thin air. Used a bunk BS PCR test. To convince people they were sick. And used 5g radiation poisoning symptoms manifested, like loss of taste and smell, and respiratory issues, to convince people they had "covid" but still to this very day, they've NEVER isolated covid 19 from humans or shown with any scientific integrity that it causes anything. The vaccine, if anything, is the bioweapon and where gain of function research, comes into play. You can't transmit a BS virus they created without injection. And that's where that research was focused. They didn't need a novel coronavirus, lab leak theories or gain of function bioweapon, bc they could play on the pervasive public ignorance about scientific methods and testing, and how they never demonstrated that covid 19 was ever real, let alone responsible for any deaths or symptoms. I have to assume anyone promoting that the virus was real, a lab leak etc, is all part of the controlled opposition counter movement to reinforce the notion that there really was a novel virus spreading. When by all accounts, there's ZERO evidence supporting that theory.

Yes, there are no "viruses" but the scientists are misidentifying exosomes as "virus" and trying to do GOF by manipulating the genetics of the exosomes. The result may in fact be toxic to humans, and the genetic sequence they made is identified as Covid simply because they made Covid tests to identify the sequence they made. So, even though there is no "virus" they are still guilty of trying to do GOF on the exosomes they thought were viruses! Note: For people who then ask, if there are no viruses, what was initially killing people? (i.e. before the vax was released) See Dr Bryan Ardis for answers to that!

The lab leak story on its face is pretty absurd. It falls apart with this simple fact:

The initial (March/April 2020) "victims" of the alleged SARS-CoV-2, the lab leak virus in question, were over 80 years old w/4+ comorbidities. Not only that but this only happened in specific jurisdictions- 15 states. Not only that but it only impacted the poor.

How is such a virus so selective? How is it that such a virus in fact did not spread widely?

If there was a bioweapon I have yet to see anyone (and I have been in these discussions for over two years with many of the more public figures) provide evidence that these bioweapons were effective and should be a matter of concern. There is no evidence for this latter point. In fact on this last point when you bring up the fact that if there were a bioweapon in the form of a _____

Hindsight is 20/20. When I look back on the news propaganda in early 2020, they plastered the bat lady picture everywhere and trump blurted out it came from a lab. Trump had no idea about anything and simply regurgitated idea about anything and simply regurgitated what his aides/advisors told him. They told him that info purposely and they plastered the bat lady picture purposely. Scare tactics to try to get people to try those new MRNA shots they had been working on for years with darpa grant money. I simply cannot believe a word we've been told. People- young and old- die from ailments every second of every day. But when you tell them there may be a lab leak (with fauci predicting it in 2017), it seems so obvious that covid-19 is NOT real. But i do believe the ill effects of 5g are real and happening.

I knew many people who got sick from the supposed covid, but who's to say what actually caused it. Something hit people's immune systems in the beginning of 2020. So let's do a FOIA request to see when they turned on the 5G transmitters. That would be VERY interesting. I'd love to have an answer one way or another.

Knowledge of both genetics, reading genetic sequences (and several thousand research papers from all over the planet) and nanotechnology, plus including the time frames (Temporal Analysis) of Charles Lieber and his nanowire research at the Wuhan University of Technology --- the disappearance of the young WIV researcher, Huang Yanling, in autumn of 2019, the rush to introduce 5G to Wuhan, etc. are quite incriminating ---- when the nanotech in the spikevaxes comes into contact with 5G it really energizes, etc.
